Interpret Europe – European Association for Heritage Interpretation

Learning from our heritage is essential for building European citizenship. Learning is most powerful where real things can be experienced first-hand, in places such as protected landscapes and historic towns, monuments and museums, zoos and botanical gardens. Interpret Europe brings all these sites and venues together.

GREEN TRANSITION

- IE works together with UNESCO on initiative Learning Landscapes, which will develop heritage interpretation based on community involvement on three levels: strategic planning, site planning and single exhibit planning.
- Learning landscapes builds not only on UNESCO values (Peace and sustainability) but also on other human values. Learning landscapes basic activity is training of various heritage profiles in one landscape / region/ area, which then on their own develop interpretive services together with other stakeholders and communities around UNESCO sites.
